Fair Management Elated By Interest Shown In 1931 Fair

Bodcaw to Hold Community Fair—Will Bring Exhibit Here

SCHOOLS TO EXHIBIT

Concession Space and Booths for Week Are Being Sought

Interest in the annual Southwest Arkansas Fair which opens in Hope September 21 continues to grow and all indications now point to one of the largest and most successful expositions in the history of the event, according to announcements from fair headquarters today. Those who attend the fair this year will see the greatest array of exhibits ever seen in this section of the state. Every foot of space in the large exhibit hall will be filled with exhibits from various communities of Southwest Arkansas.

Bodcaw Coming

Bodcaw will be represented with a community booth according to the vocational instructor in the Bodcaw Public Schools. Plans are now under way for a community fair to be held in the middle of September. The catalog is being printed this week and will be ready for distribution within the next two or three days. The exhibits shown at the Bodcaw Fair will be exhibited in the community booth which has won first honors in this department a number of times and those in charge expect to give other communities a close race this year. All community booths are urged to make their reservations at once in order that the necessary space may be reserved.

School Exhibits

Exhibits of school work, outstanding for their excellence, will be a big feature of the fair this year. Boys and girls throughout this territory have been working hard since last year's fair to prepare a big assortment of school work which will be shown during fair week. In workmanship and general ability, these exhibits will compare favorably with those of the fathers and mothers and uncles and aunts entered in the other departments of the fair. They will doubtless be a revelation to all who see them. Reservations are now being made for concession space and for commercial booths in the exhibit hall. Those who are interested in concessions on the midway and merchants who are interested in booths in the exhibit hall are urged to make their reservations at once.

Cotton Higher in Last Seven Days

Quotations Up 40 Points From Week Ending August 21

MEMPHIS.—(U. S. Dept. Agriculture)—The cotton market during the period August 22nd and 28th witnesses rather narrow price fluctuations with quotations August 28th about 40 points higher than those August 21st. Continued indifference on the part of buyers of raw cotton prevailed with transactions largely confined to small lots of cotton for filling in purposes. Demand and inquiries for deferred shipments were said to be comparatively few.

The movement of new crop cotton continues light and according to the Bureau of the Census there were gained prior to August 16th 90,414 bales, compared with 573,000 bales for the same period last year and 305,000 for the year before.

According to the Weather Bureau the week ending August 25th was generally cool in the cotton belt and in general the weather was unfavorable for the cotton crop though not markedly so for the belt as a whole. Average price of middling 7-8 inch cotton on the ten markets August 28th was 6.44 cents compared with 6.02 cents August 21st, and 10.44 for the corresponding day last season. Reported sales for the week in the ten markets amounted to 44,489 bales, compared with 134,878 for the same week a year ago.

Exports from August 1st to August 28th amounted to about 150,000 bales, compared with about 270,000 bales for the like period last season. Exports so far this season to Japan and China are considerably in excess of those for a year ago. According to the Bureau of the Census, there were operated in the United States during the month of July 25, 800,000 cotton spinning spindles, compared with 26,500,000 for July 1930.

Man Saves Life On Big Chimney

Scaffolding Crashes With Companion, Leaving 63-Year-Old Steeple-Jack Clinging to 10-Inch Ledge on Smoke-Stack 150 Feet in Air—Lines Thrown Across Tower Rescue Him 2 Hours Later

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—(AP)—Nerves of steel and a stout heart kept James Kemp, 63-year-old steeple-jack, clinging to a precarious foothold on a 10-inch ledge at the top of a 150-foot chimney Monday until he was reached after two hours by rescuers. Kemp was left up there when his fellow worker, Gendolfo di Primo, plunged to death in the wreckage of a scaffolding on which the men were working at the top of the stack.

The scaffolding broke, but Kemp caught hold of the ledge in falling. There he hung, while firemen and a great crowd below were helpless to aid him. The fire in the factory boilers would not come within scores of feet of the high place where Kemp hung. Finally, a rope was shot over the top of the chimney stack, and Kemp reached it, being able to lower himself to the ground.

Landlady Admits 1st of 12 Deaths

Rose Veras, Detroit, Insured Them, Killed and Collected

DETROIT.—(AP)—Duncan MacCrea, assistant prosecutor, announced Monday that Mrs. Rose Veras, rooming house proprietor who is being held on a technical charge of homicide following the death during the past eight years of twelve men in her house, has confessed she pushed one of the men from an attic window. The fall caused his death, so Mrs. Veras confessed to a person not connected with the police department, Prosecutor MacCrea said. He said the woman's statement declared she pushed Stephen Mark, last of the twelve men to die, from an attic window when attempts to poison him failed. Police are investigating the Detroit murder mystery on the report that Mrs. Veras insured all her boarders, naming herself as beneficiary, and collected the insurance upon their death.

Man Struck With Rock Is Near Death

Injured in Attempt to Halt Battle Between Ratio Men

DE QUEEN, Ark.—Struck in the head with a rock allegedly thrown by Alonzo Butler as he attempted to stop a fight between Butler's father and Bob Lemons at Horatio last Saturday, Hunter Greer, 26, was being fought a losing battle for his life in a hospital here Sunday night. Felled by the blow which physicians said fractured his skull, Greer was rushed to the hospital here where an operation was performed. Attendants at the hospital were holding little hope for his recovery. Butler was arrested shortly after the fight and brought to the Sevier county jail here. He was later removed to another jail in an unknown county, however, when Sheriff Jim Sutton expressed fear of mob violence.

The altercation which resulted in Greer's injury occurred on one of the main streets of Horatio, Greer being struck with the rock as he attempted to separate the two men who were engaged in a fist fight which was said to have been the culmination of an argument over five bushels of tomatoes.

PARIS, France.—(AP)—A proposal that armed forces be controlled by the League of Nations, and the prediction that France would lead the way at next year's disarmament conference, was made Monday by Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign affairs chairman of the chamber of deputies. The limitation of arms, he said, is linked with the idea of creating an international armed force to insure respect for arbitration decisions.

Highway Audit To Begin This Week

Contract Let to A. M. Pullen & Co., Virginia Firm of Accountants

LITTLE ROCK.—A. M. Pullen & Co., of Richmond, Va., accounting firm which has audited the highway departments of North Carolina and other states, will audit the Arkansas Highway Department beginning this week or next, under the terms of a contract announced over the week-end by the Highway Audit Commission. The audit will be paid for on a per diem basis, the chief accountant receiving $35 a day for each working day of eight hours devoted to supervising the audit, with senior accountants receiving $25 a day and junior accountants $15 a day. The contract provides that the audit shall be made in five divisions, as follows: First division, from January 1, 1927, to February 4, 1927, the date the Martineau highway law became effective. Second division, from February 4, 1927, to February 28, 1929. Third division, from March 1, 1929, to February 28, 1931. Fourth division, from March 1, 1931, to February 28, 1932. Fifth division, from March 1, 1932, to February 28, 1933.

The second and third divisions each cover two fiscal years of the department, the fiscal period having been changed by the Martineau law to begin March 1 instead of July 1. The fourth and fifth divisions will cover one fiscal year each. The first division covers the period from the time Dwight H. Blackwood assumed office as highway commissioner to the time the department was organized by the Martineau law.

Chief Accountant Named C. S. Golston, vice president of Pullen & Co., represented the firm in negotiations with the commission. He said J. A. Rennie of Richmond will be chief accountant in charge of the audit and that from 15 to 20 accountants will be placed on the job.

He said Mr. Rennie will come to Little Rock immediately to make a preliminary survey and that auditing work will be started within 10 days. He said the work will be expedited as much as possible and that as many men will be employed as can be used to advantage. The commission may require that the number of men be increased at any time.

Business Opposes Tax Increases for School Emergency

State Chamber of Commerce Summons Meeting in Capital Monday

INDUSTRY IS OPPOSED

Industrial Representatives Put on Record at Session Sunday

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Protests against any special legislative session to consider tax measures for school revenue, and recommendations for governmental economy, were embodied in resolutions passed at a meeting of business men called here Monday by the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce.

Several speakers recommended the abolition of state schools with the exception of the university, as one method of meeting the financial situation. Others recommended the consolidation of county offices as an economy measure for county governments.

Earlier Protest Sunday

LITTLE ROCK.—Five hundred business leaders went on record at a meeting in Hotel Marion Sunday opposing additional tax measures by the Arkansas legislature until there is a return of prosperity.

F. W. Scott, president of the Associated Industries of Arkansas, Inc., under whose auspices the meeting was called, made the principal speech. Mr. Scott, also vice-president of Union Sawmill company of Huttig, Union county, a division of Frost Industries, Inc., said in part as follows:

"For twenty months already our factories which had expanded beyond anything heretofore known to meet the needs of war and restoration of property destroyed, have been idle. Industry is paralyzed and millions of unemployed must be clothed and fed. The agriculturist has no market for his products and many instances of tax delinquencies witness his distress. We are overburdened with tax measures imposed during our period of prosperity and extravagance. In some quarters our schools complain of shortage of revenues to carry on the programs developed during the peak of prosperity. That is the purpose of the meeting today—to consider the school question."

"We should look upon it firstly as a business proposition and require an analysis of how the school tax dollar has been spent. A study of the situation in many localities develops that the schools are in much better shape than any business or industry or the business of any taxpayer."

"This time of stress and strain is no time to talk of extending our school facilities. Where economies and retrenchments of expenditures have been exercised as we have been forced to do in our private affairs, the (Continued on Page Two)

20th Century Blue-Beard Trapped Victims With Gas

Gas Mask Left in Basement Reveals Dungeon of Death

Harry F. Powers Slew Rich Women to Whom He Promised Husbands

VICTIMS ARE FIVE

Authorities, Disbelieving His Story, Continue Search for More

CLARKSBURG, W. Va.—(AP)—The discovery of a gas mask caused authorities to believe Monday that the basement of Harry F. Powers' garage near Quiet Dell may have been designed for the asphyxiation of persons by means of natural gas.

Meanwhile, searchers dug in a well near the garage for other victims who may be there besides the five he has confessed to killing in his quest for the property of matrimony-seeking women.

Revelations of the murderous work of a Twentieth Century "Blue-Beard" who lured matrimonially-inclined women of wealth to his den and there slew them instead of delivering the promised husbands, have shaken West Virginia like no story in the last generation.

Story of a Blue-Beard

Powers' own story of his crimes is told with brutal confidence.

"That's all wrong about my starving them," he says, referring to the coroner's statement that food had not been in their stomachs for five days before their death. "I wouldn't do a thing like that. I brought food down to them; of course I don't know whether or not they ate."

"Late that night I did it. Killed Mrs. Eicher first, then the two younger kids. There was no fight."

Next came the killing of the other woman, although the authorities here believe this killing did not take place that night. And last of all, 12-year-old Harry whose feeble fighting brought down on him two hours with the monkey wrench. Harry had to be carried upstairs. That accounts for the blood trickling down; then he was carried downstairs to the cot which is so cluttered with blood.

"Sure I stayed with the bodies a while. Then went out and buried them."

Motives Suspected This calm, collected, together with the whole twisted pattern of his activities with women, led police to believe that his motive was something far more sinister than money. The bodies are in too great a state of decomposition for the coroner to determine whether or not they had been mistreated either before or after death. But the bodies of the three children and of Mrs. Lemke were full clothed when dug up out of their rotted burlap bags. The body of Mrs. Eicher was clothed only in a thin undershirt.

Any remnant of soggy burlap found around the murder-garage caused excitement this Sabbath day among the thousands of curious who carried their bodies and helped their grandmothers through the mud to see "those terrible rooms, where he ought to be locked up and just tortured and starved to death."

Ravenden Youth Killed By Train

Mangled Body of Cecil Ellison Found on Tracks Near His Home

IMBODEN.—The badly mangled body of Cecil Ellison, aged 20, of Ravenden, five miles north of here, was found early Sunday on the Frisco railroad at Ravenden. No inquest has been held, but it is believed he was struck by a Frisco passenger train during the night.

Young Ellison was seen walking along the railroad about 1 a. m., and it was reported that he was intoxicated. The body was discovered about 6 a. m. by three small boys. Ellison's father is a section foreman at Ravenden. Besides his parents, the youth is survived by two brothers, Frank and Albert and two sisters, Gladys and Hilda Ellison.

Cotton Advisory Board in Session

Meets With Farm Board on Call of Commissioner Williams

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Members of the Cotton Advisory Committee conferred Monday with the Federal Farm Board on the cotton situation. The Advisory Committee is composed of various representatives of the cotton industry and was set up under the marketing act to aid the Farm Board in formulating marketing and stabilization policies.

The meeting Monday was called by Carl Williams, cotton member of the board, and was the result of several conferences between Farm Board members and senators from the cotton states last week on steps to raise the price of that staple.

Young Girl Drowns In Lake Hamilton

Inez Harvey of Avery, Tex., Loses Life Near Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS.—Miss Inez Harvey, 15, of Avery, Tex., drowned Sunday afternoon in a bayou that is part of Lake Hamilton. The girl had learned to swim since coming to visit her sister, Mrs. D. R. Rogers of Hot Springs. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers accompanied the girl to the lake. It is thought she got into deep water and, becoming excited, was unable to save herself.

The body was recovered by William Lookadoo and Earl Gillenwater half an hour later.

Parnell Here State Poll Set Public Session

Hope Meeting Held State Endorsement Long's Plan

ISSUE UP TO

Lone Star State Per Cent of Cotton Holders

Arkansas definitely committed to Huey Long's "Share Our Wealth" plan for 1932, at least in the opinion of the state's cotton growers, at a public session here Saturday. The session was called in special session to endorse Long's model law.

The largest of Saturday's meetings was held at Hope city hall, where Parnell made no public announcement as to plans for his state's cotton growers' conference, but when he decided, Arkansas will be ready at a moment's notice. Under the Long plan, the annual cotton crop would be sold at a low price in order to make the Texas alone produce 50 per cent of the nation's cotton. The issue must be settled in the state before any other state goes to the expense of raising its cotton. Huey Long, through the Louisiana legislature, has already on a challenge from Sterling of Texas, with whom he now rests.

Mr. Parnell said that the cotton growers of Arkansas are not only the largest of the cotton growers in the state, but also the most important. He said that the cotton growers of Arkansas are not only the largest of the cotton growers in the state, but also the most important. He said that the cotton growers of Arkansas are not only the largest of the cotton growers in the state, but also the most important.

Governor Parnell told the crowd here Saturday that it was his duty to prohibit the growing of any cotton whatsoever in 1932, to give the cotton growers a chance to produce a full year's crop. From these indications, he said, there will be the close of this year's harvest, cotton carry-over of close to 100,000 bales, equal to the average American consumption for one year. To eliminate this depression factor from the market, the South must drop its production for one year, the governor said.

Would Improve Prices Mr. Parnell could not say how much the price of cotton would benefit the city hall audience, although he tentatively with repeated demonstrations of approval. At the conclusion of the meeting, the farmers voted unanimous endorsement of the Long plan, and recommended the calling of the Arkansas legislature.

The crowd of approximately 2,500 only half of which were able to enter the city hall, audaciously listened tentatively with repeated demonstrations of approval. At the conclusion of the meeting, the farmers voted unanimous endorsement of the Long plan, and recommended the calling of the Arkansas legislature.

Special Session In Texas Likely

Observers Believe Cotton Legislation Would Order Acreage Reduction

AUTUMN, Texas.—(AP)—Belief that a special session of the Texas legislature would be called to consider the cotton marketing crisis was growing in the state capital here Sunday despite the fact Gov. Ross S. Sterling indicated it was too early to comment yet.

The belief was based largely on the overwhelming sentiment of such a call as was expressed by farmers in telegram and letters coming into the governor's office. The messages are in reply to Governor Sterling's news per questionnaire in which he said he would be guided in calling a special cotton session by the sentiment of the farmers.

Of the hundreds of messages pouring into the office of the governor, at least 98 per cent favored a special session, a survey showed Sunday. The majority, however, are opposed to the "no 1932 cotton" plan of Gov. Huey Long of Louisiana. The plan calling for a reduction of 50 per cent in the 1932 planting found the highest favor with Texas farmers, a check disclosed. Governor Sterling said he had reached no decision on the special call. Meantime, office secretaries were continuing to compile the data as it came into the office for Governor Sterling's study.

It's Up to Texas

Unanimous vote at five mass meetings held throughout the state Saturday leaves no doubt as to the sentiment of the cotton-growers of this state on Huey Long's "Share the Wealth" proposal—the boys are for it. Obviously the final issue is up to Texas. The Lone Star State has 16 million of the 40 million acres in the South planted to cotton, and produces about 6 million of the annual cotton-bale crop.

Louisiana has backed her governor's judgement with a session of the legislature and a model law. Now the state must act before the other states risk the thousands of dollars expense involved in a special session—for without the rest of us don't count.

Texas resolves to call a special session, there is no question in the mind of any Arkansas newspaper man but that this state will adopt the Huey Long plan immediately. The state of popularity is running that strong.

Although we did not favor Huey Long's idea, it is not saying that in the event the South resolves to adopt this program next year no newspaper will be found to oppose it on energetic than ourselves.

Getting Down to School Facts and Figures

Discussion on the desirability of calling the legislature into a special session to enact legislation for the relief of the public school system has been too general. We are talking in lump sums. We are thinking in terms of figures only. We are saying that the schools must be helped, and more or less letting it go at that.

School directors at their recent meeting in Little Rock pointed out that only from the legislature could the needed revenue come. They pointed out nine sources of revenue through which the schools could be helped.

Are we putting the cart before the horse? The sensible thing, it appears to us, would be to determine just how much money is needed and where. Taken as a whole the Arkansas school system is in a bad way financially. But this condition is far from true of all the school districts in the state.

Let's get down to facts and figures. A careful survey of the state to determine just what school districts need help, and how much, would throw some interesting light upon the subject. With this data we would have something to work with, and we would know just where to bend our efforts.

Temporary help seems to be the crying need of the schools. If we knew what districts needed help it appears arrangements could be made to loan those districts enough money to enable them to operate until next spring. No loans should be made until a careful check showed the districts were operating efficiently and with proper economy.

We believe a careful survey would reveal that a comparatively small amount of money would enable all schools to function through the coming year. We base this belief on the fact that a great number of districts in the state have already enforced such economies that their revenues will be sufficient for full operation during the 1931-32 term, and there is no need to provide additional revenue for such districts.

The economy program should by all means be extended to the state-supported institutions of higher learning. It would not be surprising to us to discover that the money which could be saved in economic operation of these schools would be of a sufficient amount to carry the districts in need through until next spring.

Whatever course is followed in the relief program, we are firmly convinced that the state survey should come first. This newspaper is a friend of the schools. We want to see every Arkansas boy and girl given the best possible training. We would be unfair not to properly educate the youth of Arkansas. But we also feel it would be unfair to heap further burdens upon the people if the same results can be obtained in another manner.

By all means let's investigate this school financial situation. I can't be as bad as pictured. We only want to know the true circumstances. Little time would be lost by the survey, and we feel much good come from it.

A special session of the legislature is expensive. Another session, no matter what form it takes, is more so. Arkansas has far too many taxes already and if we can possibly avoid levying any more, let's do so.

Noble Possibility

PRIME MINISTER RAMSEY MACDONALD of England has determined to balance the British budget for the coming year. To do it, he proposes to reduce expenditures rather than to increase taxes—which, considering the load the British taxpayer bears, is fair enough—and it is his estimate that not less than $500,000,000 can be lopped from the government's expenditures.

A half-billion-dollar reduction is a big one; and how any government is to accomplish it is a puzzling question. Obviously the easiest way to do it is to cut military expenses; and since other nations besides Britain are looking for ways to reduce expenditures, the pending armament limitation conference ought to start with an excellent chance of success.

Too Much Banana Oil on Troubled Waters!

Washington Letter

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Senate investigating committees have been razzed for years with allegations of muckraking, but none of them ever went on such a long and protracted panning party as the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Enforcement.

That's the Wickersham commission. It investigated and reported on a dozen or more aspects of observation, enforcement and the general administration of justice. And it found more things rotten than were ever discovered in Denmark.

Considering all the brains and effort that went into the reports, both from commission members and able research experts and investigators, it is not strange that they seem to be getting little attention from politicians who would have to act to make various changes the commission has urged.

The commission was Herbert Hoover's baby, most widely ballyhooed of all the genuine Hoover commissions, but one learns at the White House that not even the President has been reading the reports since the commission got off to a bad start with its two prohibition reports—one forced from it as a political emergency and the other badly mishandled to conceal its import.

Nevertheless, the commission's fearlessness in its last nine or 10 reports has been almost as startling as some of its discoveries.

It found there was no adequate observation or enforcement of prohibition, that there had been a steady increase in drinking and an unprecedented regime of corruption. Present enforcement, it said, represented little more than local option. Seven of 11 members favored changing the laws and the rest were admittedly doubtful whether prohibition would ever be enforced.

A large proportion of police chiefs and their subordinates was reported to be mediocre, untrained and unfit, nearly always owing their jobs to politicians. The commission said that in large cities the alliance between criminals and corrupt politicians controlled in part where it did not entirely control the police forces.

PARNELL HERE

Arkansas legislature in special session. Governor Parnell reached Hope from Little Rock early Saturday morning, went from here to Lewisville where he addressed a crowd of 300 during the morning, and returned to Hope for noon luncheon and the meeting here Saturday afternoon. The governor returned to Little Rock by automobile at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, convinced, he said, that the overwhelming majority of Arkansas cotton farmers want the Huey Long program adopted for 1932.

Other meetings were held throughout the state Saturday at the following places: Camden, Piggott, Conway, Lake Village, Magnolia, Osceola and Star City.

Osceola Votes 'No'

All unanimously endorsed the Long cotton prohibition law, except the meeting held at Osceola, one of the county seats of Mississippi county, the largest cotton production area in Arkansas, with an annual crop of about 100,000 bales, or 10 to 15 per cent of the state's production.

The Osceola meeting opposed the Long plan, and asked instead that the Arkansas legislature pass a law prohibiting any farmer from planting more than 50 per cent of his cultivated land in any one crop in 1932. Permanent pastures and corn fields interplanted with soy beans or other legumes would be excluded from the percentage.

Congressman W. J. Driver made the principal address at Osceola.

In one Ohio town it's against the law to get shaved on Sunday. Probably wouldn't tolerate murders either.

Americans Pass Night in Mexico at Laredo

LAREDO, Texas.—(P)—About 200 Laredo persons, many of them women and children, were forced to spend the night in Mexico Saturday night when they failed to "make the final rush" across the international bridge before closing time.

Lack of sufficient customs inspectors to handle the last-minute crowd which congregated shortly before 9 p. m. was blamed for the failure of the Americans to get back home.

Residents of Nuevo Laredo, returning to their homes from Laredo, were not stopped.

OKLAHOMA CITY.—(P)—Unless recent gasoline price increases in Oklahoma are called immediately the state corporation commission may start an inquiry to determine "whether collusion and monopoly" directed them.

In making this announcement, Paul Walker, chairman of the commission, declared the refining companies "can't use $1 a barrel oil as an alibi for raising the price of gasoline."

He proposed to request the other commissioners to join him in the inquiry if the new prices are not cancelled.

AT the sound of his son's voice Travers whirled. "So it's come to this!" he snorted. "Love nest!" The man's face was livid and terrible. "Gone to the gutter, have you?" he roared at the youth. "You'd leave a decent home and parents who've given you everything in the world for a cheap intrigue with a common—"

With one bound Mark Travers was in the room, slammed the door behind him. "Stop it, father!" he demanded. "Have you gone crazy? Don't let me say one word against Norma! She's the sweetest, finest girl I've ever known. You'd better apologize for that remark!"

"Apologize! The elder Travers' voice fairly sparkled. "Apologize! Do you know what you're saying, you young fool?"

Mark came nearer, eyes blazing. "I do," he said with alarming calm. "I do know and I demand an apology to Miss Kent. Well—" he went on the older man's cheeks took on an apoplectic tinge, "are you going to begin?"

The older man broke in violently. "Are you trying to make an idiot out of me? Trying to pretend something hasn't been going on that I've seen with my own eyes? The girl and I understand each other. She'll listen to reason all right. Now, Mark, you get out of here—"

It was Norma who came forward. "Just a minute," she said in a voice that struggled to steady itself. "Mr. Travers, I—I'm beginning to see what you think of me. It's not true though. It's not true! Mark's never even been in this room before!"

He came tonight because he was invited to dinner. I live here with another girl. Oh, you mustn't believe there's been anything wrong! I tell you it's not true!"

She let him kiss her, rested in his arms while Mark patted her shoulder as one might comfort a child. After a moment Norma straightened.

"It means we can't see each other any more," the girl said miserably. "You mustn't come here again."

"Why, Norma?" Mark looked at her in astonishment. "Nothing of the kind! We're going to be married. Right away! Why, darling, I wouldn't give you up for anything in the world. Don't you know that?"

"Oh, it's sweet of you to talk that way but we can't. Throwing away your whole life—that's what your father said it would mean. I—I can't let you quarrel with your father over me. He said you couldn't ever come home. You'll have to go, Mark—"

"But I tell you I won't! Sweetheart, we're going to be married right away. Tonight! Please, Norma. Won't you marry me tonight? Oh, you darling—!"

SHE felt his kisses on her lips, her cheek. In the soft hollow of her throat. His dear head bent to hers. It was a maddening, utterly unanswerable form of argument. It banished haunting terrors that had been like knives in Norma's heart. It opened vistas of rarest rapture. Now, it she only dared—!

Chris Saunders, feeling her presence neither called for nor heeded, had stolen from the room. When she reappeared after a discreet interval she found Norma and Mark still in each other's arms. They greeted her exuberantly.

"Chris—you can't guess!"

"It's going to be tonight. Congratulations! Isn't this wonderful? And don't you think I'm the luckiest guy in the world?"

"You'll have to come with us, Chris!"

The older girl stopped short, surveying them. "Am I to take all this as a wedding announcement? Remember I haven't even met the young man yet, Norma. Do you honestly mean you two are planning to be married tonight?"

They chorused assent. There followed half an hour of excited, incoherent planning. Norma and Mark were to drive to Woodbury in the next county to be married. Chris was to come along. Mark departed to give the girls time to dress, to hunt up an acquaintance to act as the second witness and to fill the car with gas.

It proved an evening of surprises. The friend Mark brought to make the fourth in the wedding party was Bradley Hart, Chris' employer. Mark had run into Hart on the street. There were swift introductions. With a minimum of flurry they were off in the roadster at last, headed for Woodbury. Mark drove with Norma beside him. Chris and Brad Hart were in the rumble seat.

By nine o'clock they were passing through the outskirts of Marlboro. Ahead lay the state highway. The roadster's speed increased.

Nine-fifteen found them plunging through darkness. At that very moment Bob Farrell, anxiously gripping the receiver in a pay station phone booth, waited for the voice to come over the wire. There was none. Five seconds. Ten seconds. At last he heard the operator's crisp soprano, "They don't answer!"

vision's a grand and a glorious thing, enchanted and mystical view, it paints a bright scene of the joys it will bring, a glowing and brilliant hue. Task is a joy, for it's something to do; a discipline stern, yet refined, it's the thing that builds character, noble and true, through achievement of muscle and mind. But a taskless vision is a dream that is vain, and a visionless task is a grind, and the hope of the world is the soft, sweet refrain. A task and a vision combined, Rev. W. P. Harriman.

Aboard Airliner Eastern Air Transport

Dear Peggy

I'm almost too excited to write, and there's so much to see, both inside the plane and out. We've left Washington behind now, and I've just had a Chesterfield in the smoking compartment—they serve them on every ship.

"Among the eighteen passengers there's a senator and a foreign diplomat, and I'm surprised at the number of women. The trip is two hundred miles and the meter in the cabin reads two miles a minute, think of that.

"For me, the Chesterfields were the nicest touch of all. I was just dying for a smoke, and when the hostess passed them (and my favorite cigarette at that) everyone else seemed as tickled as I was. And my—they did taste good!

Smoking compartment, Washington-New York plane. Hostess offering Chesterfields. Photos by courtesy Eastern Air Transport, Inc.

Chesterfields are served in the smoking compartments of all these planes—the largest and most luxurious in the East. With the fast growth of air travel, Chesterfield makes many new friends each day, here as in city streets and country homes—wherever good taste counts.

A mild cigarette—delightfully mild and smooth—with a tobacco fragrance all its own.

Whether you're air-minded or not, you'll always find Chesterfield on the air-line to taste—the quickest way to get there. They Satisfy!

By Williams Cards Take Two From Pittsburgh

Derringer Registers 21st Inning of Scoreless Pitching

Behind the sterling pitching of their two best pitchers, the St. Louis Cardinals swept a double-header from Pittsburgh, at St. Louis Sunday, the scores being 5-0 and 4-1.

Paul Derringer held the Pirates to six hits in the first contest, while "Wild Bill" Hallahan allowed them but seven safeties in the nightcap. Derringer's shut-out of Pittsburgh ran his string of scoreless innings to 21 straight.

With the Cardinals now leading by 11 full games, both Chicago and New York slipped Sunday. The Cubs bowed to Cincinnati, 4-3; and the Giants won and lost against the Phillies. New York taking the first 6-2, but dropping the final 3-0. Boston won and lost against Brooklyn. The Braves beat Dazzy Vance in the opener of a double-header, 3-2, but Brooklyn won the final, 4-3.

In the American League, Washington returned home to play the Athletics, and beat Eddie Rommel with nine hits, 5 to 1. But this left the Athletics still 15½ games ahead, and the championship actually already decided. Washington had a disastrous trip on the road the last two weeks, and a slim crowd saw the Senators go through their performance Sunday.

The New York Yankees got 21 hits off Boston to beat the Red Sox 14 to 4. Gehrig made his 37th homer and drove in four runs. Babe Ruth got two hits in four times at bat.

The photographs so obtained are very clear and may facilitate the diagnosis of different forms of gastric and reveal cancer formations from the beginning. The camera is also useful for examinations after surgical operations.

Roosevelt Employment Relief Program Pushed

ALBANY, N. Y.—(AP)—Gov. Roosevelt's unemployment relief program had the right of way for the second week of the special session of the New York state legislature as the senators and assemblymen returned to Albany Sunday night.

Senator George R. Fearon, republican majority leader, announced at Syracuse that the state's relief measures would be pushed through as speedily as possible.

"Other issues can wait," he said in discussing the unemployment situation. He pointed out that home relief in 20 cities must be aided by outside help this winter and the only place they can get it is from the state.

"The governor and legislature are in agreement on that proposition."
